

Conference Summary:

The U.S. public health system is moving toward increased use of evidence-based policy and systems change to prevent disease, promote health, and eliminate disparities. How do we go beyond the buzz words to understand what's really happening and gain tools to strengthen our own communities, organizations, and residents?

Plenary and Workshop Themes:

- Supporting Locally Grown Food: Synergy and Conflict
- Prevention in an Era of Healthcare Reform
- Making Us acCOUNTtable: Data in the Service of Communities

The keynote by national public health leader, Dr. James Marks, will provide inspiration as we innovate despite economic challenges. Interactive plenary sessions and workshops will provide opportunities to return home with useful information and valuable relationships.
